

At Park St. George, with the witness as an official of Clements, was complaining of the heat as he walked into city hall to take out his pushcart license. (Genesee, investigation developed, was hearing more than his share of the heat burden—his clothing had caught fire from a corncob pipe, which he placed in a packet before continuing a license clerk. He extinguished it by blowing himself.

Ernest Ford Will Address Y.M.C.A. Workers Tonight

ERNEST FORD

The fourth report in the Y. M. C. A. Apple Production Financial Campaign shows the total to date well past the half way mark. Competitive spirit between the divisions is running high. There seems to be every indication now that by the final report next Monday night the $10,000 goal will be realized.

Division I, headed by Mr. Broughton and Mr. DeWitt, have turned in better than a $1,000. Division II, headed by Mr. Reindel, Mr. Winters and Mr. Schutt, are a very close second, having almost reached the $1,000 mark. Prices offered each night are being hotly contested. Edna Britt had the largest number of pledges for this report. The Rev. Mr. Mayskens reported the largest amount. The ladies' team prize for the largest amount was awarded to Mrs. Dunlop. Door money centered several prizes, taking $45 in bonuses for the greatest number of pledges, covering the most prospects, and reporting the largest amount of money.

Division prizes were awarded to Division I. The small cup given for the largest number of pledges was retained by Mr. Broughton and Mr. DeWitt. The large cup for the largest amount reported also was taken by Division I. Division III, headed by Thomas Howland and Mr. Norton, having won it at the last report.

The Rev. Mr. Mayskens and George Matthews joined the Twigs for having secured $75 each and the Buis Club was increased by the addition of the Messrs. Haines, Hutton and LeFevre for having secured $150 each.

The talk of the evening was given by George Reindel. He likened workers on a competitive campaign doing something for a community to a tree. The tree spreads energy in boundless amounts until the effects are felt from the tip of the smallest tap root to the end of the highest leaf. The energy of the campaign workers must be so spread that it reaches every person of the community and energizes them to helping this community cause.

Dinner this evening was served by the ladies of St. Paul's Lutheran Church. The Rev. Mr. Mayskens gave the invocation.

At the report meeting this evening, the talk will be given by Ernest Ford, personnel secretary of the state office of the Y. M. C. A. Mr. Ford was formerly executive secretary of the Troy Y. M. C. A.

The basic system installed now will be such that should later it be learned that a course is not demanded, alterations can be made and a course in demand substituted.

Any modified plan for installation approved by the board will be subject to approval from Albany but since the courses to be taught must be built around local demand it is not anticipated there will be any difficulty in arriving at an approved installation with the state department. Numerous conferences have been held with the state at which the local board received valuable information as to possible required courses. On these suggestions the board has acted after visiting other schools in similar cities. The matter will probably be discussed this evening at the board meeting.

Former Head Nurse Of TB Hospital Dies

May Ward Myers, who for four and half years was head nurse at TB Hospital when that institution was located off Clifton avenue, died suddenly Thursday night at her home, 391 East Chester street. She was a member of the Reformed Church of the Comforter.

About 11 years ago she came to Kingston as head nurse at the hospital and served in that capacity for approximately four and a half years until the new hospital was erected and opened. Prior to coming to Kingston she had been employed for about four years. Mrs. Myers was a graduate of the Fulton Hospital and had also served as head nurse and matron at the Troy Tuberculosis Hospital. Devoting most of her early life to service in tuberculosis institutions, she had also been connected with the Schenectady County Tuberculosis Hospital, and also with the Tuberculosis Hospital at Lockport. She also spent some time on the nursing staff of the Niagara Tuberculosis Hospital for Children.

Surviving is her husband, Joseph Myers, of Kingston, and nine step-children. Mrs. Sarah Rame, of Hudson; Mrs. Beatrice Rame, of Hudson; Mrs. Beniah Garrison and Geraldine Myers, of Kingston; Lewis Myers, of Kingston; Leon Myers, of Hudson; Guy Myers, of Hudson; Joseph Myers, of Kingston; and Stanley Myers, of Hudson. Also surviving is one sister, Mrs. James Budd, of Oswego; one nephew, George Budd, of Rochester.

Funeral services will be held from the late home, 391 East Chester street, Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Relatives and friends invited. Interment in Church of Comforter cemetery.

Performs Again

By special request "Buddy" Frommer will again demonstrate by tying at the booth of the Ulster County Fish and Game Association at the food show in the Kingston Municipal Auditorium tonight. "Buddy" demonstrated his ability on Wednesday night and attracted many people by his ability in this art and many people remarked that they were surprised that it was possible for so young a person to tie flies so neatly and well. In addition members of the association are in attendance at the booth and are ready to help with any fishing problems which you may have.

LaFollette Starts A New Party

have one underlying cause; the failure to produce enough real wealth to support a secure and high standard of living."

"If there is plenty to go around," he said, "there is security, happiness and tolerance through the nation. But when there is not enough, people reluctantly turn to some public authority, which uses its control to divide what there is. But dividing or sharing wealth is not a solution."

He warned that the nation faces a day of reckoning.

It may not come this year or the next, he said, but the cold, inescapable truth stands before us. The American standard of living today is supported by an enormous mass of outworn public and private debt."

The Wisconsin executive, likening the new party movement to a religious crusade, said the nation must blaze a new trail that will apply fundamental teachings of the past to the modern world, freeing itself of unemployment by wealth creating work under government direction.

Against Ims

Old fashioned Capitalism, Socialism, Communism or Fascism do not offer a way out, he said.

"Those who honestly but mistakenly seek the 'good old days' with the cry 'restora confidence' make a fatal mistake. The capitalist locked up within our financial institutions is not idle because of fear of panic. Capital is idle because the machinery that kept it at work became obsolete with the disappearance of the old frontier."

Socialism, the Governor asserted, is not one of the available crossroads because it is based on a theory that does not fit America.

"The philosophy that proposes to reward work and achievement on the basis of individual contribution."

"Nor does either Fascism or Communism offer a way out. Both are founded . . . on the ancient principle that a chosen few (whether from the top or bottom of the economic ladder) shall make the decisions and rule by force."

"Our world moves toward war, chaos and barbarism. What then are we to do?"

Seeking the answer, LaFollette said, thousands of average men and women from every walk of life conferred over many months and "it is their decision that brings us here tonight."

He announced the decision to create a new party in these words:

"A beginning has been made, here and now, not in 1914, not in 1940, but now, in 1935."

"Party of Our Time"

"The National Progressives of America are now organized. State by state we shall build as rapidly as firm foundations can be laid. Definitely and irrevocably we are in the lists to stay until the American people recapture their heritage."

"Make no mistake, this is not a third party. As certain as the sun rises, we are launching the Party of Our Time."

Breaking finally with the national administration which he criticized in a series of radio addresses last week, LaFollette praised the "brilliant leadership" of President Roosevelt but said party dissension had hamstrung the administration's efforts toward rehabilitation and that leadership alone, no matter how great, "cannot mix political oil and water."

The Democrats and Republicans have been "fumbling the ball" for years, the governor declared, because the parties are founded on political lines marked out in 1860, with nothing to do with 1935.

The new trend of government, he said, must be one of expanding production. Two potential fields he listed as modernizing of the railroads and a "long overdue task" of improving housing conditions.

"Just these two alone," he said, "would put billions of idle capital to work and create millions of new wealth-creating jobs. They alone would end unemployment in America for years."

The new party will fight under the symbol of a blue flag emblazoned with a circle, containing a cross. The cross stands for the voter's ballot mark and the multiplication of wealth, LaFollette said.

Railways Serve Notice Wages Will Be Cut on July 1

Chicago, April 29 (AP)—The Association of American Railroads adopted today a resolution under the railway labor act to serve notice of a 15 per cent wage reduction effective July 1 for all classes of labor.

The cut would represent a saving of $250,000,000 annually to member roads, the association said.

In a memorandum, the association stated the wage cut was necessary because of loss of revenue and increases in operating costs.

Revenue losses the association laid to a decline in traffic, diversion of traffic to competing forms of transportation and inadequacy of the recent freight rate raise allowed by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Operating costs were higher, the memorandum said, because of advanced payrolls due to the 1937 wage increases and adjustments, costly and restrictive interpretations placed on working rules by a judgment board particularly for employees in the transportation group, legislative expenses incurred in opposing regulatory measures, tax expenses, and the increase in materials and supplies costs.

Committee Meeting

The committee appointed to draft the by-laws for the newly organized Kingston Aldermanic Association, and a meeting of the association will be called in May to take action. It is not expected that the meeting will be held until after the Ulster County Apple Blossom Festival on May 6, 7 and 8.

Iron and steel products amounting to nearly 360 million dollars were bought by the railroads last year.

Came to Work in Borrowed Clothes

D. J. Waples, manager of the Endicott-Johnson store on Wall street, came to work in borrowed clothes this morning. Reason, all his clothes were destroyed by fire which was discovered about two o'clock this morning in the clothes closet of the Waples apartment on the first floor of the house at 107 Franklin street. The fireman answered a still alarm and extinguished the fire with chemicals, damage being confined to the interior of the closet. It is thought that defective wiring was the cause of the fire.

Fortunately a suit which Mr. Waples had sent to the dry cleaners had not been delivered to his home, although it was ready for delivery.

BABSON ON BUSINESS

INFLATION WORLD-WIDE INFLUENCE

Babson Sees Cheaper Currencies, and Bear Market for Cash
Babson Park, Mass., April 29.—Not one major nation in the world today is paying its bills out of current earnings! The governments of the six big powers are spending far more money than they are taking in from taxes. The resultant deficits are being met by public borrowing. This condition has been going on now for years and there is no end in sight.

Moreover, the deficits for 1938 promise to be the biggest on record since the World War. Because of these astronomical short-cuts, I am convinced that current inflation is a world-wide, not just a national, probability.

The fact that public finances abroad are in such bad shape is overlooked by most people when considering inflation. If the pound, franc, mark, yen, and lira weaken to the crumbling point they will carry down with them the value of the dollar. Following the short period of improvement after the devaluations of 1932 to 1934, the international currency situation has already again become acute. Despite the sleight-of-hand tricks being played by the monetary authorities, somebody, somebody, must pay the Piper. When the pay-off comes, there can be only one way out—inflation!

Spend Back Prosperity

The seriousness of our own situation is well-known. The President's new program of gigantic outlays to "lick the recession" simply accents it. Few doubt that the accepted method of fighting hard times from now on will be to spend billions. But remember that it is far easier to turn the faucet on than it is to turn it off. Since this country committed itself to a spending program, the cost of all branches of federal government has driven ahead full steam. The figures for 1938-9 will be the largest in peacetime records. Our federal debt is today $38,000,000,000—almost double the level of eight years ago and rising faster than ever.

Furthermore, practically every major city, county, and state treasury is following the same course. Relieving the unemployed and priming the pump is a good policy provided it results in people going off relief and government expenses being slashed. In practice this does not happen, however. Small pressure groups succeed in keeping costs at a high pitch while people soon learn that the government will support them if they do not work. Public expenses today equal at least one-third our national income. In 1912 they represented only one-tenth!

Hitler Financial Magician

The trend is the same in every major nation. The fascist countries are the worst off. Hitler and Mussolini can be licked by finances long before they are by guns. It has been years since Germany's budget was truly balanced. Her credit is so poor that she can hardly buy foreign exchange. If it were not for Der Fuehrer's bag of economic tricks, the German mark would be worth much less today. The Nazis are keeping the lid on prices. Once they ever break loose Germany could have a repetition of her 1923 fiasco.

Mussolini is in the same boat. His secret "extraordinary" expenses are bigger than his ordinary public budget. Such non-recurring receipts as jewelry and wedding rings, contributed by Italian women, are classed as ordinary income. His ordinary expenses alone equal his receipts, leaving him nothing to pay his extra expenses. Armaments, Abyssinia, Spain and the like are taking a fearful toll. How long Il Duce can continue to keep going by juggling his budget figures and printing paper money is anybody's guess.

Japan May "Crack" First

Japan's National debt has more than doubled in seven years. It is now equal to her annual national income. This debt, increased by vast armament outlays and the China War, is being loaded on her banks. Currently, only one-third of Japan's annual budget is being met by taxes. Because she is so dependent on outside countries for many raw materials, Japan may be the first nation to hit the skids.

Her situation—and all the others for that matter—is like the man in your community who is spending more than he is earning. How long he can buy on credit, no one can predict. But everyone knows that, unless he soon reforms, he will end up in the bankruptcy court.

France and Great Britain are also in a pickle. France ranks as the weakest of the democracies from a financial standpoint. Her budget is hopelessly unbalanced and has been for years. There may be further devaluation of the franc, however, before the final blow comes. Great Britain is the only major nation to have balanced her budget in the last eight years—but she did it only three times. Her enormous rearmament load will this year carry expenses for above tax receipts—and taxes are already sky-high.

Thirty Billion Dollar Deficit

Altogether the combined government deficits of the above five powers, plus our own, will this year equal about seven billion dollars. Here is a tabulation showing the approximate deficits of these major nations since 1930. Undoubtedly, the actual shortages are greater than even these published figures indicate:

United States . . . $20,000,000,000
Great Britain . . . 2,500,000,000
Japan . . . 2,000,000,000
France . . . 2,000,000,000
Germany . . . 1,000,000,000
Italy . . . 1,000,000,000

Total . . . $29,000,000,000

Unless a renewed spirit of brotherhood sweeps the world, there can be only one result: The steady cheapening of the value of all currencies in terms of goods. The dollar, the franc, and the other currencies will buy fewer and fewer pounds of beef, copper, cotton, and rubber, fewer and fewer bushels of wheat and corn. This means inflation and soaring living costs. We are in a long-term bear market for cash; and a long-term bull market for goods, real estate, and common stocks. The entire world—from the Thames to the Yangtze—must choose between character and chaos!

Arranging for Conclave Here

SIR ARTHUR L. LEE

In preparation for the 125th Grand Conclave of the Grand Commandery one of the busiest men is Sir Arthur L. Lee, Right Eminent Past Grand Commander of the Grand Commandery.

He is chairman of the Grand Commandery Grand Conclave Committee and is responsible for the arrangements for the entire conclave. He has had considerable experience in such matters having served as chairman for other Grand Conclaves and also as General Chairman of the Triennial Grand Conclave of the Grand Commandery of the United States which met in Miami, Fla., in 1937. Roundout Commandery No. 52 was host to the commanderies of the 5th Zone at the Annual Zone Conference held in their Asylum, 250 Wall street last Saturday afternoon and evening. There was a large delegation present and the work was under the supervision of Sir Alfred R. Cobbett of Cooperstown, N. Y., Eminent Grand Warder.

The Conclave Committee of Roundout Commandery is working hard on the housing arrangements for the Grand Conclave. All those in Kingston who will have rooms available for June 12, 13 and 14 are asked to communicate with George D. Burnett, Box 218, Kingston Post Office, 43 Hindsdale avenue, or Telephone 3439.

The parade committee is completing its plans for the big parade which will be held on Monday, June 13 at 3 o'clock. This parade will be headed by the Temple Commandery Band of Albany, composed of 50 pieces of All Knights Templars in full uniform. The Kingston Post No. 150 American Legion Drum Corps will head St. George's Commandery No. 37 of Schenectady, who expects to have over 100 Sir Knights in line. Other commanderies will come headed by their own musical organizations. It is expected that there will be at least 20 mounted aides in line. This will be the largest and most colorful parade ever held in Kingston and with its mass formation will furnish Kingston with a spectacle that will not soon be forgotten.

Lightning protection for buildings is more important for people, says Professor A. Goodman of the New York state college of agriculture at Cornell University, for the buildings have to stand out in the storm where they are instead of going down into a narrow valley, or into the woods, or to another building. A good lightning protective system of rods or cables will protect not only the buildings, but livestock, stored contents, and the family as well.

Japan's National debt has more than doubled in seven years. It is now equal to her annual national income. This debt, increased by vast armament outlays and the China War, is being loaded on her banks. Currently, only one-third of Japan's annual budget is being met by taxes. Because she is so dependent on outside countries for many raw materials, Japan may be the first nation to hit the skids.

Her situation—and all the others for that matter—is like the man in your community who is spending more than he is earning. How long he can buy on credit, no one can predict. But everyone knows that, unless he soon reforms, he will end up in the bankruptcy court.

France and Great Britain are also in a pickle. France ranks as the weakest of the democracies from a financial standpoint. Her budget is hopelessly unbalanced and has been for years. There may be further devaluation of the franc, however, before the final blow comes. Great Britain is the only major nation to have balanced her budget in the last eight years—but she did it only three times. Her enormous rearmament load will this year carry expenses for above tax receipts—and taxes are already sky-high.

Thirty Billion Dollar Deficit

Altogether the combined government deficits of the above five powers, plus our own, will this year equal about seven billion dollars. Here is a tabulation showing the approximate deficits of these major nations since 1930. Undoubtedly, the actual shortages are greater than even these published figures indicate:

United States . . . $20,000,000,000
Great Britain . . . 2,500,000,000
Japan . . . 2,000,000,000
France . . . 2,000,000,000
Germany . . . 1,000,000,000
Italy . . . 1,000,000,000

Total . . . $29,000,000,000

Unless a renewed spirit of brotherhood sweeps the world, there can be only one result: The steady cheapening of the value of

COMMODITY REVOLUTION

A vast revolution in the prices of raw commodities is one of the important causes of the "financial derangement, social distress and political unrest which have plagued the world during the last 20 years," according to Dr. Melvin T. Copeland, professor of marketing in the Harvard Business School.

Technological developments, plus the opening up of new sources of production in response to the war needs of 1914-1918 and the readjustments since then, have greatly increased the production of many staples. At the same time, there have been shifts in demand which have reduced the markets for them. The changes have produced an apparent "perennial glut" in world markets. Eventually, he believes, when the revolution has been completed, the prices of many raw commodities will have stabilized at a level below those prior to 1920.

The world has sought in various ways to combat this trend without fully understanding it. Import tariffs, preferential trade agreements, varolization schemes, cartels, governmental controls of production and marketing, and monetary measures have been tried. They have failed because all prices do not rise and fall alike. There is no single, general remedy for a disturbance of relationships within the price structure.

When we finally adjust ourselves to the effects of the commodity revolution, Dr. Copeland explains, we will all be better off, because there will be a greater abundance of basic raw materials yielding a higher standard of living for the whole world. That little detail of getting adjusted is the difficult trick.

AMERICA—WORLD MASTER

Of all the economic and political seers in exile, Leon Trotsky in his Mexican refuge is perhaps the most brilliant. What he says about world affairs is always interesting. Here is something of special interest to Americans.

Interviewed by S. L. A. Marshall for the North American Newspaper Alliance, and asked what would happen in case of another general war, if the United States stayed clear of it and was not involved in revolution, he replied: "It may alter the map of North America. But I repeat what I wrote 15 years ago, and today feel more strongly than ever—in that event, the United States will become the absolute economic master of this planet. There is the main chance ahead of you—that Europe's tragedy may mean America's fortune. If the United States can avoid the next great war, it will know more about power and prosperity than it has ever known. It will dictate the building of a new world economy."

That is complimentary and reassuring, and should strengthen the determination of all influential Americans to keep out of the next big war. Yet many of our own people will not talk so confidently. How can we hope to control "a new world economy" if we cannot even control our own domestic economy? We must first put our own house in order.

TWO COUNTRIES SHAKE HANDS

The signing of a border pact and the removal of barbed wire entanglements and machine-gun emplacements between two countries in Europe certainly is news. Yugoslavia and Bulgaria are the two nations that have decided they can live side by side without armed protection against each other. Relations between the two have been improving steadily. Furthermore, they find the cost of maintaining military borders too high for them.

The thing may not be so much a matter of love as of expediency, with political ramifications in other European areas hard to analyze at the present time. Even so, it is an inspiring event. The rest of Europe won't try the experiment, probably, for years to come, though it would be better off for doing so.

STUDENTS OF GOVERNMENT

"Problems of the United States Government" is the general topic of the third annual Harvard-Princeton Conference on Public Affairs. There will be five round table groups discussing "Government and Monetary Control", "Government and the Current Depression", "Government and the Relation of Labor to Capital", "Foreign Policy", and "Propaganda and Public Opinion in a Democracy."

These are all timely subjects, understanding of which by the rising generation is of tremendous importance. The present conference is sponsored by the Yale Daily News, the Harvard Crimson and the Daily Princetonian. It is a student undertaking, supported by many leading authorities on the subjects up for study. There was a time, some years ago, when college students didn't know that governments had problems. Today they are keenly interested and rather well informed on the subject. It is a hopeful condition.

AN AMERICAN PLEBISCITE

The recent plebiscite conducted by Mayor William E. Cage of Woburn, Mass., was so fair that it is recommended to Adolf Hitler and all other political dictators, foreign or native. It didn't cost the city anything. The only expense involved, the printing and distribution of ballots, was paid for by voluntary contributions of local patriots. It was an unofficial election, but the mayor regards it as binding on him, and hopes the city council and school committee will likewise bow to the will of the people.

His first plank was reduction of unnecessary public employees, in which he was upheld. His second plank was a plan to reform lapping citizens by hauling them around town in a cage until they are sobered, when arrested for inebriation. He had the cage already built at a cost of $300. The people turned that down. His Honor is regretful about that, but bears no ill will. Really this plebiscite idea isn't half bad. It might end troublesome disputes in many a community.

FITTING HEARING AIDS

An individual who is hard of hearing merits a friend whom he knows is similarly afflicted and is surprised at the improvement of the friend's hearing due to the use of a new hearing aid he is wearing. His friend's hearing is so much improved that he decides that he will get one of these new hearing aids. To his dismay he finds that the hearing aid which so greatly helped his friend's hearing is absolutely unsuitable for him as the increased amount of sound actually disturbs him and the sound is less clear than with his old hearing aid.

Why the difference in hearing aids? Are not hearing aids just meant to "increase sound"? The individual whose eyesight is failing can go into a five and ten-cent store and purchase glasses that will magnify an object so that he may see it more plainly but if he wants his particular eyes fitted to correct poor vision due to shortsightedness, long sightedness, astigmatism or other defect, he must consult an optometrist or an oculist. Similarly with the hearing.

Loss of hearing is not the same in all cases. Some cases are due to frequent colds and chronic catarrh, the inflammation from which may extend up the air-carrying tube from throat to middle ear and set up an inflammation there. The inflammation may affect the three little bones which "conduct" sound from the ear drum across the middle ear to the ending or plate of the hearing (auditory) nerve, so that they become ankylosed (one solid bone) which cannot conduct the sound properly from ear drum to the nerve going to brain.

Then there is the hard of hearing due to disturbance of this hearing nerve itself caused by infection, injury or other conditions. A physician tests the hearing with the ticking of a watch or a tuning fork placed near the ear drum and then at certain distances away from the ear, or he may place the watch behind the ear (on the big lump). Generally speaking (not always however) if the ticking is not heard so well at lump back of ear, some damage to the hearing nerve is suspected. If sound is not heard so well at the ear itself, then some damage to the sound-conducting bones, due to catarrh or middle ear trouble is suspected.

The lesson then is that those who are hard of hearing should be fitted with hearing aids best suited for their particular type of hard of hearing.

The Boxwood Barrier

By BLANCHE SMITH FERGUSON

"I know about everything! You're in love with Cissy." Nothing could stop Judith now.

The Story So Far: Judith Goodloe, married self-made Reuben Oliver for his money, only to discover he is bankrupt. Faint are born. Then red-headed Cissy Rogers, who loves Reuben and is out to get him, finds a job for him in a lumber camp managed by Gary Brent—the man Judith loves. Gary insists that Judith get a divorce, telling her that Reuben is going to marry Cissy. Then he discharges Reuben.

Chapter 40
The Old Feud

REUBEN would be home to-night! What would they say to each other.

Gary did not notice Judith's silence. Scowlingly he kicked a loose stone from the path, sent it whirling down the hill. He said, as though to himself, "Civilization is a great thing. Left to my own inclinations I'd have killed Oliver this afternoon."

She stared at his darkly frowning face. She had never seen Gary angry before. It was not a pleasant sight. "What happened?"

"Before I went away I gave orders for 200 pipes to be felled and shipped from the left ridge. They had been sold, the money collected."

Savagely Gary kicked loose another stone, lost in his own irritation.

"Well?" Judith prodded.

"When I went to the ridge this morning, the 'pipes' were still standing."

"Still standing?" she echoed parrot-like.

"Oliver's orders." Rage shook Gary's usually well modulated voice.

"Reuben's? Was he left in charge?"

"Certainly not!"

"I don't understand—"

"He has the men bluffed into believing he knows more about trees than the Lord. No made them."

"He has made it impossible for me to get the lumber."

"He has made it impossible for me to get the lumber."

"I've stood it for your sake. Today," his hand in his English glove clenched, "I drove him off the reservation as I would a mad dog."

She felt embarrassed. "I can't understand why he would disobey orders."

"He thought to make trouble for me with Gary," she blurted.

She still didn't understand how disobedience to orders helped Reuben with Gary but she did not argue about it with this new, darkly frowning Gary.

He said: "Oliver has had Curtis using his influence to try to stop me."

"Gary—are you sure?"

"Of course, I'm sure! Gary's usually fine, clipped English was blurred and harsh. "Oliver has his nerve to think he could hurt me!"

She had no words. She who venerated honor, who had sacrificed her life for her conception of it.

"Let's not waste another thought on him, Judith. Let's talk about us. There is the end—Gosh—if you knew how I hate your belonging to him! Don't lose your courage tonight, Judy. Get everything washed up thoroughly and quickly. Wish I could be in on it!"

Judith managed a smile.

Now He Was Sane

GARY looked at his wrist watch. "Whew! Three—twenty! I'll have to hustle to make the Junction."

"Gary," panic stricken, "you're not going away?"

"Just to square myself with the people who bought those pipes. They're sore as boils! You needn't worry about Oliver, putting up a fight like as crazy to be free to marry Cissy as you are to marry me."

He turned and walked away.

Reuben wouldn't fight—Clem Rogers had warned her she would take the fight out of him—Reuben wanted to marry Cissy—"You'll be right back, Gary."

Gary hesitated. "No, I'm taking a couple of weeks' vacation, Judith."

"Leaving me?" aghast.

"Blazing trail! I'll be waiting for you in Maryland."

An hour later Lu Wing met her dawdling on Winding Hill.

"Missy no bring yeast powder."

The yellow boy eyed her empty hands reproachfully. "Boss man velly much like hot biscuits," he reminded her sternly, "Boss man him inside."

Boss man him inside! The crack of doom! Gabriel's trumpet! It had come now—not tomorrow, next week, but now!

All the reasonable arguments, the righteous resentment, the high sounding words she had rehearsed coming up the hill deserted Judith. Her legs became just two logs of wood. It was difficult to propel herself up the steps and across the porch. Her hand, suddenly cold, gripped the door knob—Boss man him inside!

Reuben stretched upon a divan under a casement window, was reading a newspaper. He arose as Judith came into the room.

"Hello!" pleasantly. "You didn't expect me?"

"Yes," she forgot to be tactful, "Gary told me."

The line of his mouth straightened. "Then you know the glad tidings?"

"Yes."

"That saves a lot of trouble." He walked to the fireplace, stood with his back against the chimney and studied her through narrowed eyes. Once her loveliness would have sent his senses whirling. He had been mad. Now he was sane.

A Dangerous Foe

JUDITH studied him in turn. Brown hair as a bow string. He didn't appear a bit crafty. She said: "Jobless again."

"The handwriting has been on the wall for some time. I didn't tell you because I hated to worry you."

She removed her red beret, flung it on the table. His composure answered her. "If you knew, why did you wait to be discharged?"

"Need I remind you that my only source of income—"

"You've deliberately disobeyed orders?"

"You know about that too?" His voice chilled several degrees.

She seated herself in the nearest chair. "I know about everything."

"Just what do you know?"

"I know," nothing could stop her now. She was caught in the landslide, even as Reuben had been caught in it on the night of her coming to this camp. "You did not save the pipes felled as Gary told you. I know you have been working sneakily, steadily to get his job."

"I know—there was no holding it back—" you are in love with Cissy. "I know."

"Stop!"

The word cracked like a pistol shot, silencing her as effectively. It whizzed through the shadows, whirled a signal gun. The old feud came staggered out of the shallow grave in which it had buried it on that September night in Piney Way.

Judith was vaguely conscious of hearing a noise. She was not sure whether it was the ticking of the clock on the mantel or the angry beat of her own heart. She Reuben outlined against the fireplace—no longer patient, quiet, but a very tangible, dangerous foe.

He said slowly: "A little knowledge is dangerous. You might as well know more."

"You needn't bother—"

"It's a pleasure," with exaggerated politeness.

HUDSON RIVER STEAMBOATS

These articles are written from the collection of George W. Murdock, veteran marine engineer.

No. 29—James B. Schuyler

The history of the "James B. Schuyler" is perhaps one of the most colorful of any of the old Hudson river steamboats, although the vessel was not too large, being only 195 feet long, but possessed of great speed for her size.

She was built in 1863 for service in New York waters, plying on several short routes out of New York harbor. In 1867-1868 she was in service on the Bridgeport-New York route running in line with the steamer "Bridgeport."

Then in the winter of 1871 Commodore Hancox purchased the "James B. Schuyler" and this was the beginning of her career as one of the most colorful steamboats ever to ply the Hudson river. Commodore Hancox had been operating the steamboats "Commodore" and "C. Vanderbilt" on a night line between New York and Troy for several years, but had been forced out of the route in the summer of 1871 by the Citizens Line of Troy.

In the spring of 1874 Commodore Hancox placed the "James B. Schuyler" in service, competing with the Troy and Albany lines—and then the fun began, lasting until at one time the fare between the metropolis and Troy and Albany was only ten cents.

"Sunnyside" of the Troy Line and the "Drew" of the People's Line of Albany, were the chief rivals of the "James B. Schuyler," and the captains of the three vessels resorted to all sorts of schemes to give their boat the advantage in the race for the lion's share of the business.

Several of the incidents recalled by Mr. Murdock relative to this keen competition are extremely amusing. Working out the ill-fated "Sunnyside" along with William Fairbrother of Port Jervis, Mr. Murdock was an eyewitness to these various pranks, which were written into the record of the "Schuyler."

One of the favorite tricks of the skipper of the "James B. Schuyler" was to pull up along side of one of the opposition vessels such as the "Sunnyside" and then strike up the band aboard the "Schuyler." The passengers growled to one side of the vessel to better enjoy the music and this would cause the boat to list to one side, raising one paddle wheel out of the water and cause the vessel to lose speed and let the "James B. Schuyler" forge ahead to the next landing. On one such occasion the "Schuyler" was playing this trick on the "Sunnyside" when the "Dean Richmond" passed both vessels. The "Schuyler" immediately took out after the "Richmond," caught up with her, and began the band playing all over again.

The resourceful skipper of the "Dean Richmond" ordered the safety valves on his boat to be lifted, thus making a terrific racket and drowning out the band aboard the "Schuyler," so his passengers could not hear and would therefore not rush to one side of the steamboat.

Another incident told by Mr. Murdock records the happenings of a rainy night at Albany. The "Schuyler" docked at the Albany landing above the "Dean Richmond" and along the railroad tracks, waiting for passengers.

The next meeting of the Ladies' Aid Society of the Rifton M. E. Church will be held on Wednesday evening, May 4, at the home of Mrs. Mary Davis at 8 o'clock. As plans will be discussed at this meeting for annual strawberry festival the president would like as many members as possible to attend. Also any other ladies who wish to join with the Aid are cordially invited to be present at this meeting.

gers from the train. Clem Hancox, son of the owner of the "Schuyler," went ashore with a red lantern under his coat, and when the train came along he waved the danger signal, stopped the train, and while the train crew were investigating to find out why the engineer had stopped above the station, the station had been reached, left the train and flocked about the "Schuyler." When the train finally arrived at its regular destination there were no passengers left for the "Dean Richmond."

Old Commodore Hancox at one time decided that he would pay no wharfage at the Troy landing, so the train owners built a high board fence around the landing of the "James B. Schuyler." When the steamboat pulled into the dock there was no place for the passengers to land. The Commodore's men were immediately ordered ashore with axes and bars, and soon the high board fence was only a mass of splintered lumber floating away down the river. The police were called and the crew of the "Schuyler" was escorted to the city jail. Then it was that the Commodore decided to pay the usual wharfage.

The "James B. Schuyler" continued running as an opposition boat until the fall of 1875, and in the winter of that year the People's Line and the Citizens Line united to buy off Commodore Hancox and bring an end to the destructive competition which was ruining the business of all three of the companies.

The "James B. Schuyler" was used for excursions around New York harbor during the summer of 1876 and was then stripped of her staterooms, her boilers placed in the hold, and she was converted into a regular excursion boat.

Later she was used on the Fishing Banks run, continuing here until 1896, when on October 18, as she was laying at her wharf at New York, she caught fire and was totally destroyed. Her hull was sold and taken to Port Washington on Long Island, where it was broken up.

IT'S ODD

But It's Science

By HOWARD BLAKESLEE

AP Science Editor

New York—Several factories are going up in Europe to make synthene, the newest of the substitutes for gasoline as a motor fuel. The substitutes are being used increasingly in countries that lack the bounteous petroleum supplies of the United States. The new fuel comes first from water gas. If this gas is allowed to flow over hot alkali and iron, at nearly 900 degrees Fahrenheit and under great pressure, it forms an oily liquid. The pressure is 150 atmospheres, or more than 2,000 pounds to the square inch.

The oil is called synthol. When this oil is boiled under the right pressures some of its molecules "crack". They break down into the hydrocarbons which form explosive motor fuels.

These new gases are called synthene. When the process was discovered about 15 years ago, synthene contained too much oxygen. This is now cleaned out of the gas by adding hydrogen from catalysis.

Europeans hope that the new fuel will not cost as much as gasoline made from cheap grades of coal, which have been on the market for years. In England the government promotes manufacture of this coal-gasoline as an economic and defense measure.

Dry Brook.

Dry Brook, April 28.—Mr. and Mrs. Henry Gray and niece, Ruth Gray, also friends, Ralph Warner, and daughter, Ruth and Esther Cornelia, all of Norwich, spent the week-end with Mrs. Gray's mother, Mrs. Hiram B. Graham in this place.

Final Day of the "Test Pilot" Essay

Today marks the final day of the "Test Pilot" essay contest being conducted by the Broadway Theatre. If you haven't submitted an entry yet be sure to get it in the mail this evening or present it at the theatre before noon tomorrow.

It's a chance for everyone to try for two round-trip flying tickets to California or a 21-day custom-built radio. On the West Coast the winners will be introduced to Clark Gable and watch movies in the making. For the past week the Broadway Theatre has conducted the contest in conjunction with the opening tomorrow of "Test Pilot," starring Clark Gable, Myrna Loy and Spencer Tracy. The picture deals with the hazardous existence of those daring aviators whose job it is to test airplanes. From this absorbing story has been drawn the question, "What Do You Think of The Airplane As a Means of National Defense?"

Every member of the family ought to have an answer for that question. Write your answer in an essay of 200 to 500 words and send it to the Broadway Theatre. But remember—it must be there before noon tomorrow.

The most original and nearest entry submitted will be selected and forwarded to New York where it will be entered along with winning entries from other parts of the nation. National judges will then select the best of these and to the final victor will go the valuable awards. The local competition will be judged by Harry G. Lamotte, president of the Kingston Junior Chamber of Commerce, and F. Gundersen, city manager of the Regent Theatre in Kingston.

The name of the person writing the winning essay in the local contest the essay that will be submitted to New York for the big national contest will be announced later. Decision of the judges will be final.

OFFICE CAT
By Junius
Our Baby.
A bundle of bliss, is little Steve.
Our only child, our only joy;
A glorious thrill from his very touch;
He is a heavenly boy.
A little sob, a tiny tear,
The cry dies away, he's sound asleep—
So snuggly and sweet, as we gaze on him;
These memories we'll always keep.
So soft and golden are his curls,
His dimpled cheeks an angel kissed,
The lips were carved by the Unseen Hand.
A small yet sturdy wrist,
In him we see the symbol of love:
A oneness of thought and spirit and deed,
Devotion firm as a mighty rock,
Understanding each other's need.
GLADYS MON DORE.

Every church contains two kinds of people:
1. Those who run things.
2. Those who haven't the nerve to speak up.
Man—You say you can tell your wife wants money when she pouts?
Friend—Yes—by the way she purses up her lips.

A husband can stand an occasional tongue-lashing from his wife—and expects it—but he is exceedingly tender on the subject of stock-market operations, and every humane woman with a grain of feeling ought to know it by this time.

First Oyster (in a stew)—Where are we?
Second Oyster (disgusted)—At a church supper.

First Oyster—Why do you suppose they became extravagant and got two of us?

Important Customer—I want two strictly fresh eggs, poached medium soft, on buttered toast, not too brown, coffee with no sugar and plenty pasteurized guernsey cream in it, and two doughnuts that aren't all holes.
Waitress—Yes, sir! Would you like to order any special design on the dishes?

A Mother's Plait
Hours of working, cooking meals,
Hours of mending stockings, heels,
Hours of reading story books,
Hours of teaching manners, looks,
Hours of patience, hours of hope,
Hours with youthful minds to cope—
How I'd love to be alone
And have one hour all my own!

Smith—We lost half our kitchen equipment when our country home burned.
Jones—Which was it, the can opener or the corkerew?

Sweet Young Thing (coming in with attentive partner from a room where a bridge game has been in progress)—Oh, mother dear, I've just captured the booty.

Mother—Well, well! Come here and kiss me, both of you.
What can't be diagrammed on a table cloth can't be explained by some people.

Here's One for You To Try
Take your age—
Multiply by 2
Add 5
Multiply by 50
Add the loose change in your pocket under a dollar.
Subtract 365
Add 115—
And the first figure in the answer are your age and the last two are the change in your pocket.

The farmer was showing his new farm hand around the farm, explaining all the jobs he would have to do. When the long list had been completed the man asked:
New Farm Hand—How about clearing the snow from the highways?

Farmer—What on earth do you mean? There is no snow at this time of the year.
New Farm Hand—No, but by the time I've finished all the jobs you have planned for me there will be.

How do you know the man is a failure? Even a yes-man hasn't failed if that is what he is trying to be.

April 25, 1938.
Freeman, Officer, Kingston, N. Y.
Dear Sir:

This is to inform the public that the statement in last night's paper to the effect that the license of John E. Nagele has been suspended for the cancellation of his insurance policy is false. For the past three years this statement has appeared in the paper, and that it is corrected, as my license has never been suspended for that cause or any other.

Hollywood Sights And Sounds

—By Robbin Coons—

HOLLYWOOD—For the next cycle of backstage musicals on film, a suggestion: a picture or two about the unknown chorine who gets her Big Chance when the temperamental star walks out—And then goes back to the chorus line. It happens, as the screen never admits, much more frequently than the happy ending always employed. It happens in Hollywood, too, and more frequently than the public, writes only success stories.

Currently Dick Powell is taking a "vacation" without out pay. He wouldn't play in "Garden of the Moon" and hence took suspension. It isn't the first time Dick has quietly gone off salary to avoid a role he didn't like. Each time they've made the picture with a substitute, but the "vacation" isn't over-run with spare Powells in consequence.

The Case Of Payne.
In "Garden of the Moon" John Payne is taking a "vacation" without out pay. He wouldn't play in "Garden of the Moon" and hence took suspension. It isn't the first time Dick has quietly gone off salary to avoid a role he didn't like. Each time they've made the picture with a substitute, but the "vacation" isn't over-run with spare Powells in consequence.

The Cinderella formula has worked in many cases. When Myrna Loy pouted over salary and left town, Metro turned to an obscure little foreigner, just learning English, and put her in the picture. Myrna abandoned. The picture, "The Sign of the Cross," was a success. The picture, "The Sign of the Cross," was a success. The picture, "The Sign of the Cross," was a success.

And Jack La Rue
On one of George Raft's several roles for what he considered his professional health the role he left behind was filled by Jack La Rue. Raft had refused the unsavory assignment in "The Story of Temple Drake" on the grounds it would turn the fans against him. La Rue, comparatively unknown, had tried pictures once before with no result. So "City Streets" made a movie star of Sylvia Sydney.

At The Theatres

—By Robbin Coons—

Broadway: "Romance in the Dark." Another story of a girl singer who rises to fame in the opera is tunelessly displayed at the Broadway with Gladys Swarthout in the starring role. Although Miss Swarthout is no great shakes as an actress her beauty and her glorious voice make up for her dramatic sterility and she is fortunate in having John Barrymore in a featured role to add comedy and skill to an otherwise drab presentation. John Boies is also in the cast of this Paramount picture. Lovers of good music will enjoy "Romance in the Dark" and everyone will enjoy Mr. Barrymore's excellent acting.

Kingston: "Her Jungle Love." What might be termed an imaginative "whopper" comes to the Kingston in all the baroque splendor of Hollywood jungle scenes plus one of the most exciting plots ever devised by a scenario writer. This is the story of a wild jungle princess who learns the meaning of love from an adventurous young man who is trapped and captured and nearly tossed to the crocodiles by her bloodthirsty warriors. Filmed in Technicolor and staged expensively, "Her Jungle Love" is sheer make believe which is also grand entertainment for young and old alike. It moves with rapid gusto through a maze of desperate happenings and brings you out unscathed after 80 minutes of enjoyment. Dorothy Lamour, Wheeler and Robert Woolsey, the second action picture of the west with Charles Starrett riding and singing his way to success.

Tomorrow
Broadway: "Test Pilot". Considered by many to be the most brilliant melodrama of the year, "Test Pilot" comes to the Broadway staged in all the excitement which surrounds men whose job it is to flirt with death in order to make the always safe for passenger and commercial flying. This is the story of a reckless test pilot whose duty consists of testing new safety devices on airplanes and who takes planes to high altitudes, to see how much pressure they will stand before the wings rip off. It is a lively, spirited picture, filled with danger, romance and comedy. The dialogue is especially well written and the work of Clark Gable, Spencer Tracy, Myrna Loy and Lionel Barrymore is a joy to see. The sky scenes are done with fascinating perfection and there are many moments of real suspense. Wynn-Stayler, this film is a stand-out bit of entertainment, recommended to everyone.

GERMINATION

Important point in planting seeds or plants is to bring them into close contact with the soil. The ground should be covered with a layer of soil and packed around the roots of plants.

NYA For Upstate Granted Increase

Because the need of young people for work has become increasingly serious over a period of several months, the National Youth Administration for upstate New York has been granted an increase which will allow 400 additional youths to be assigned to work projects for the remaining two months of the fiscal year.

Providence is one of the largest of our cities, and the long-stemmed, sometimes reaching a foot tall, keeping for days without rain. They range in color from pure white to palest pink, rose, scarlet, maroon and crimson. The dark shade of red, the rarest, and a basket of seed will give a prevailing number of tones.

At this season, then, we should be using preventive measures, and equipping ourselves with a contact sprayer to kill the caterpillars.

Louis DuBois, Your Ancestor And Mine, Says L. J. Rooney

At the quarterly dinner meeting of the Descendants of the New Paltz Patentees held Monday, April 25, at the Chrysler Building in New York city, Lila James Rooney, F. G. B. S., delivered an address entitled "Louis DuBois, Your Ancestor and Mine".

Prefacing her subject, Mrs. Rooney said:

Mr. President, our distinguished member, Judge Hanbrouck, fellow members and guests. Our president has told you that I must say something—from earliest childhood, I disliked to be read to; I always wanted the book to search for the pictures and then I wanted each and every picture explained; and if there were no pictures, I had no use for the print. Tonight, while I have prepared a paper, our president has reserved that for print and I should rather draw mental pictures. When I think of New Paltz, I see one outstanding picture and nearly every one here tonight can guess what that picture is—Mohonk mountain. Mohonk holds memories for all of us whose roots go back to Ulster county—travelling memories for me, as I recall many of the drives behind a pair of Chip Tanney's horses on the road from New Paltz to Mohonk with my father. And, always as I drive from New York to Woodstock over route 32, I watch through the gathering darkness for the light in the tower on Sky-top, the symbol of a guide which never failed and I live those days again in memory!

The text of her address follows: Mohonk, towering 13 hundred feet skyward, stands as a sentinel guarding New Paltz. Since the days when ox-carts moved lazily along its winding trails until now, when high-powered cars dash over its roads, Mohonk has held irresistible charms as it has ever been the scene of the historic activities of a romantic people. The scenery of those lovely mountains, combining beauty and grandeur with romance—rocky cliffs with waters, deep and still; here, height and depth both speak and God's love answers from the tower on sky-top, the symbol of a guide which never failed and I live those days again in memory!

It was in June, more than two centuries and a half ago, that Catharine DuBois climbed wearily up those same hills, all about her the laurel must have been burning into bloom; but she could have had little heart for the beauty of it all, with her baby, Jacob, pressed close to her breast and the little Abram and Isaac clinging to her skirts, weary and bewildered, as they were captives of the Redmen and the story of their rescue is the story of the settlement of New Paltz by the Huguenots.

The subject of our thought tonight is the history of a people of nearly two centuries in the making, a story of strife to secure and maintain freedom of religious worship. The meaning of the word Huguenot, to which various historical writers have accorded significance, was given by Voltaire; he wrote that the word was derived from "oldennessen", allied by Oath.

We cannot call that Frenchman, who was not a Protestant, a Huguenot. The Huguenots were reformers against the Catholic Church. Their leader was John Calvin, whose revolutionary doctrine echoed and re-echoed from those immortal shores of Lake Geneva. We do not properly appreciate the Huguenot unless we recognize that his influence and place in history is based upon his love and reverence for God and his insistence upon the right to worship God in his own way. Whatever of individual enterprise, commercial policy or heroic daring might have been blended with his zeal for religious liberty in the hearts of our Dutch fathers, the history of the French Protestant refugee leaves not a single doubt as to the sole purpose which brought him to the shores of the new world.

It was his religion that turned the eyes of the Huguenot from the tricolor to follow an alien flag; it was his religion that tore from the heart of the Huguenot the flames of France; it was his religion that forced him to flee across the borders of the Rhine and finally to find his home in a strange and far-off land.

The Huguenot was the flower of France. His clean life was a constant reproach to the shocking morals of the court. The long reign of Louis XIV, distinguished for its corruption and its unremitting persecutions was a sore trial to the Huguenot. Nothing appeared to be more certain about 1650 than the Revocation of the Edict of Nantes—this meant but one of two things—conversion or extermination!

The Royal decree—"We forbid our subjects of the Reformed Protestant Religion any more to meet together in any place or private house for the purpose of carrying on any part of their religion and we do hereby our prohibition that neither they nor their wives or their children or their goods or effects under penalty of death for the men and the confiscation of bodies for women."

Our forefathers determined that they would no longer endure this perpetual repression and they crossed the borders of France and entered the friendly province of Paltz in Germany, where they tarried at Manheim until they took passage to America. The first to come to Ulster county were Matthias Blanschan with his wife and three children and Anthony Crispel and his wife, who sailed in the Golden Otter, 26 April 1660. On 12 October 1662, Nicholas DePuy, his wife and six children sailed in the Jumerland Church, Louis DuBois, his wife, Catharine Blanschan, and two sons certainly preceded DePuy, although the date of their emigration is not a matter of record. They joined the Dutch Church in Kingston, 1 October 1661 and on the ninth of the same month, their son, Jacob was baptized. Antonio Crispel and his wife, Nadelein Blanschan, were sponsors at the ceremony, the baptism being No. 9 on the church records.

Louis DuBois, or Louie, the Walloon, as he is sometimes styled in the church records, was the leader of the Huguenots of Ulster county. He was granted a tract at New Dorset now Old Hurley, 25 April 1663, where at once he became prominently identified with public affairs; his prominence is attested by the fact that as early as 1669, he was overseer of Old Hurley. The surviving records show him to have been in the forefront of every important undertaking. He was a strong character with a tenacity of purpose. He established a general trading post, importing cloth, eastern ware, sugar and spices from Holland and the Barbadoes, which he traded with the settlers in the tower on Sky-top, the symbol of a guide which never failed and I live those days again in memory!

On 7 June 1663, less than two months after the date of Louis DuBois's grant, the Indians doctored upon the Dutch settlement. New Dorset and a part of Wiltwyck were destroyed and some forty women and children carried into captivity. The official records which survive record their names. Among the prisoners were the wife and three children of Louis DuBois, two children of Matthias Blanschan, the wife and child of Antouil Crispel and Rachel Delamontagne, the wife of Surgeon Gysbert vanimbrock. Not a living soul remained at New Dorset to tell the tale; several had been massacred and desolation reigned. Louis DuBois, the leader of the little community, returned at night to find his new home in ashes, his young wife and babies gone.

After many fruitless attempts on the part of the survivors to rescue the prisoners, assistance was finally given by the government at New Amsterdam. Gov. Stuyvesant sent a force of troops with two cannon under command of Captain Martin Cregier with orders to reduce the Indian forts and villages to ashes and to destroy the Esopus Indians. This was the largest and the most important expedition sent against the Indians during the Dutch Colonial period. Captain Cregier and his troops accompanied by volunteers from the settlement marched into the wilderness. Several times the soldiers returned to Wiltwyck bringing Indian trophies. One long journey was made over the mountains to Wauversing, the stronghold of the Esopus Indians.

Upon their arrival the soldiers found the fort abandoned, the squaws with the white women and children had been hurried away, burned the growing crops and stores of grain and returned to Wiltwyck. And, as the summer passed, Louis DuBois became hopeless and distracted. What of Catharine all these weeks? History gives no hint of her. All we know are the stories which have come down to us from the days of Louis. We are told that every evening Domine Blom led his little congregation to the fort at Wiltwyck and there offered prayer for the safe return of the loved ones. Tradition tells us that it was early September when a friendly Indian brought word to the settlement that the Indians were guarding the prisoners on the mountain near Brunswick. Meanwhile, Rachel vanimbrock, captured and found her way home. In October, Captain Cregier with a party of volunteers which included the dauntless Louis DuBois set out from Wiltwyck with Rachel vanimbrock as a guide. They followed the Rondout and the Walkkill creeks; Louis DuBois, pressing always in advance, surprised an Indian scout near Libertyville, before the latter could give the alarm; his death prevented the news of the approach of the white men and the Indians were taken completely by surprise. In the desperate fight which followed the Indians lost their chief and a score of savages, while Capt. Cregier's casualty list was five dead and six wounded.

There is a legend woven around the name of Catharine DuBois which has been immortalized in song and story and which was the theme of the pageant during the 250th celebration of the founding of New Paltz in 1927. Tradition tells us that the chief of the Esopus Indians had ordered Catharine to be sacrificed. The squaws had gathered, faggots and laid them in piles; all was ready for the fire to be lighted when Catharine began to sing; she sang while the Indians stood motionless "O daughter of Babylon, who art about to be destroyed." The Psalm was interrupted by a shot and Louis DuBois and his followers rescued the terrified captive.

group journeyed to Wiltwyck along the Walkkill trail. Louis DuBois was attracted to the fertile plain and the natural beauty of the valley and tradition tells us that then the hope was born that some day French church might be established there. It was not until September 28, 1663, however, when his sons, Abram and Isaac, were young men that the hope was realized. The survivors of the years during which Louis DuBois remained at New Paltz were a meagre; but it is evident that his life did not run smoothly. The Court records reveal that he was the defendant in many actions. The sale of brandy to the Indians was prohibited but the traffic was carried on extensively at New Dorset, where Matthias Blanschan conducted a distillery, and where, on one occasion, the magistrate informed Stuyvesant that distilled water had been found at the house of Louis, the Walloon, which had not been reported. On 6 October 1673, Louis DuBois was elected a magistrate; his term was brief, however, he was replaced by Abraham Hasbrouck. From October 1661-April 1674, the baptism of his children appear regularly on the baptismal records of the Dutch Church; the baptisms of his three youngest children are not recorded although from their marriage records we know that they were born at Old Hurley. Whether the Dutch offended him or whether the loyalty of his Walkill beckoned we do not know; but whatever the reason, we know that the little band of Huguenots under the valiant leadership of Louis DuBois left Old Hurley in the spring of 1677 and founded New Paltz on the Hudson river which they had purchased from the Indians.

Louis DuBois is credited with having arranged the final purchase of a tract approximately twelve miles long and seven miles wide; beginning at Rosendale, bounded west by the mountain, running south to the present settlement of Brunswick and stretching from the two extreme points in parallel lines eastward to the Hudson river. The purchase was confirmed by a Patent granted by Governor Andrus, 29 September 1677 to Louis DuBois and partners, Christina Deyo, Pierre Deyo, Abraham Hasbrouck, Jean Hasbrouck, Andrus, LeFevre, Simon LeFevre, Louis Bevier, Antouil Crispel, Abraham DuBois, Isaac DuBois and Hugo Freer.

These early patentees had come to a land, utterly new and strange, with one fixed purpose—to enjoy a freedom of religion untrammelled by priest or prelate. One of the first buildings was a log hut which served as a church and school house. Their chief care was to provide religious instruction for their children. The services of the Rev. Pierre Daille, the established minister of the French Church in New York city. The New Paltz Church was organized in January, 22, 1675 with Louis DuBois, elder, and Hugo Freer, deacon. The important historical fact of the actual founding of a French Church at New Paltz, is found in a record of the church, written in French. It contains eight distinct handwritings with autographs of Louis DuBois and Abraham Hasbrouck and this interesting entry:

"Blessed be God, who has put it into our hearts to build a house where He may be adored and served, and which by His Grace we have finished and God grant that His Gospel may be preached here from one age to another until the day of Eternity."

In fancy, we can see the little church in the calm of Sunday morning and those who know sleep that last sleep, close by its ancient site, crossed its threshold with prayer and thanksgiving—for here, at last, they had found that peace that passeth understanding. Here, without fear, their minister preached the Gospel and administered the sacraments. Here, they brought their new-born babes; here he might lay his hands upon them; here he joined in marriage young men and young women, whose descendants were, and here, at last he closed the eyes of those who were weary along life's pathway and tenderly prayed for those gone to that inurne from whence no traveler returns.

On 19 May 1688, Louis DuBois made another move which history does not explain, on that date he purchased for 40 pounds a house and lot of Dirk Schepmoes, on the northwest corner of what is now John street and Clinton avenue, and again sought the companionship of the Dutch settlers and their dead. After the death of her husband, Catharine DuBois married Jean Cottyn, a very worthy Huguenot, formerly school-master of New Paltz.

The Dutch dominion of the Kingston Church entered this unusual record to which Catharine Cottyn refers in her will "3 September 1703 was baptized Rachel aged 17 years; after profession of her faith she received the sacrament of Holy Baptism, besides the several Baptisms required of her in the formula of baptism she has promised to serve her mistress, Catharine Cottyn, and her master, Jean Cottyn, faithfully and diligently until their deaths and after wards to be free."

I will tell the freedom dated 22 September 1702, which I have given to Rachel, which her name is now after having been baptized shall remain in force and she shall have things and pieces of eight and other things and she shall have it before my children divide their shares. I will that that freedom which I have given to Dinah, dated 17 August 1709, shall remain in force and be properly observed."

Catharine Cottyn left surviving a daughter and six sons; but it was to none of these her negro girls should go as slaves. Such is the testimony, your ancestors and mine have left upon the written page. We cannot but glory in our descent from these great souls, men and women, who believed in the Divine right of human liberty of conscience and were truly a light to lighten the world. Their cause was freedom. For that joy of freedom they suffered, sacrificed and were willing to die. They helped to found this mighty nation. They left to you and to me a priceless heritage. Mohonk still stands as a sentinel, guarding the place they loved. That mountain challenges us! What are you and I willing to do to protect that heritage from these sinister forces which would destroy it from without and from within?

Mohonk darkens in the western sky. Threatening shadows around her pathway lie. We soar in soul her inspiration gives. She lifts her peak and converse holds with Heaven!

Britain's Royal Air Force reportedly plans to develop a corps of physical and mental "super men" to fly 400-miles-per-hour fighting planes.

SOCIAL ACTIVITIES

Concert Drive To Close Saturday

Saturday is the close of the campaign for the Kingston Cooperative Concert Association, and it is hoped by the executive committee of the association that no one will be left out. The plan of the organization requires that all those interested in hearing the concerts to be presented next season must join this week, and before 5 o'clock tomorrow evening. A capacity house was secured for the present season, and it is anticipated that with such an outstanding series of attractions as has been announced, a repetition of another sold out house will result from the current campaign.

There are many people who did not realize that only those holding membership cards were admitted to the concerts, because no single admissions are sold for any performance. This means that very often applications for single tickets were made, and were necessarily refused.

Nearly 100 captains and workers are contributing of their time and effort this week to make good music possible through this drive. The association is operated on a no-profit and no-loss plan. The executive committee of the association feels that the attractions offered for next season give everyone a chance to hear some of the greatest musicians and musical ensembles available.

It is understood from headquarters in New York that the number of members who join the Cooperative Concerts in Kingston is among the highest according to the percentage of population, anywhere in the country. It indicates from this comment that Kingston is interested in good music.

It is not necessary to be asked to join the Cooperative Concert Association, but anyone may do so by applying directly to the campaign headquarters located in the Sun Room of the Governor Clinton Hotel up to and until 5 o'clock tomorrow evening. For additional information telephone 2700.

Mirph Meant "Watch Tower"

The Hebrew word Mizpah or Mizpeh, meant "watch tower" and was used as the name of numerous places in Palestine. The modern use of the word as a paring salutation or as a talismanic inscription on rings, comes from the covenant between Jacob and Laban (Gen. 31: 49). At Galed they heaped stones as a memorial and called for a divine witness in these words: "The Lord watch between me and thee when we are absent one from another."

Many Use S-Mark

More than 25 countries besides the United States use the S-mark to designate monetary denominations which vary, in American money value, from two cents to $1.03. In Brazil, says Collier's Weekly, the S-mark is employed in place of the decimal point. Thus one hundred reis is written $100. And one milreis, or a thousand reis, is written $1000.

Following the Mass, the annual communion breakfast will be held at the Kirkland Hotel under the supervision of Sir Knight John J. Egan. Speakers at the breakfast will be the Rev. Henry E. Baker, faithful comptroller of Kingston Assembly.

Ligurians Settled in Genoa. The origin of Genoa, like that of many other towns founded before the Christian era, is lost in the remotest ages. According to tradition, the Ligurians gave up pastoral life and came down to the sea, populating its coasts and forming the first nucleus whence originated the town, which afterward dominated the Mediterranean. Later the Ligurians came in touch with the Greeks and the Phoenicians, with the Etruscans and the Carthaginians, and greatly increased their commercial and naval power.

Unable to learn who had access to a crib book found after a recent examination, the conjoint board of the Royal Colleges of Physicians and Surgeons is making the whole class of 150 retake the exam.

Louis DuBois, Your Ancestor And Mine, Says L. J. Rooney

At the quarterly dinner meeting of the Descendants of the New Palz Patentees held Monday, April 25, at the Chrysler Building in New York City, Lila James Rooney, F. C. B. S., delivered an address entitled "Louis DuBois, Your Ancestor and Mine".

Prefacing her subject, Mrs. Rooney said:

Mr. President, our distinguished member, Judge Hanbrouck, fellow members and guests. Our president has told you that I must say something—I from earliest childhood, I disliked to be read to; I always wanted the book to search for the pictures and then I wanted each and every picture explained, and if there were no pictures, I had no use for the print. Tonight, while I have prepared a paper, our president has reserved that for print and I should rather draw mental pictures. When I think of New Palz, I see one outstanding picture and nearly every one here tonight can guess what that picture is—Mohonk mountain. Mohonk hold memories for all of us whose roots go back to Ulster county—treasured memories for me, as I recall numbers of less drives behind a pair of Chip Tamney's horses on the road from New Palz to Mohonk with my father. And, always as I drive from New York to Woodstock over route 32, I watch through the gathering darkness for the light in the tower on Sky-top, the symbol of a guide which never failed and I live those days again in memory.

The text of her address follows: Mohonk, towering 13 hundred feet skyward, stands as a sentinel guarding New Palz. Since the days when ox-carts moved lazily along its winding trails until now, when high-powered cars dash over its roads, the Wallkill valley has held irresistible charm as it has ever been the scene of the historic activities of the Huguenot people. The scene of the early life of mountains combining beauty and grandeur with romance—rocky cliffs with waters, deep and still! Here, height and depth both speak and God's love answers from the azure dome of sky. He would be strange indeed who could remain indifferent or unmoved on that ground which has been dignified with the wisdom, the bravery and the faith of his fathers!

It was in June, more than two centuries and a half ago, that Catharine DuBois climbed wearily up those same hills, all about her the laurel must have been bursting into bloom; but she could have had little heart for the beauty of it all, with her baby, Jacob, pressed close to her breast and the little Abram and Isaac clinging to her skirts, weary and bewildered, as they were captives of the redmen and the story of their rescue is the story of the settlement of New Palz by the Huguenots.

The subject of our thought tonight is the history of a people of nearly two centuries in the making, a story of strife to secure and maintain freedom of religious worship. The meaning of the word Huguenot, to which various historical writers have accorded significance, was given by Voltaire; he wrote that the word was derived from "edgenossen", allied by Oath.

We cannot call that Frenchman, who was not a Protestant, a Huguenot. The Huguenots were reformers against the Catholic Church. Their leader was John Calvin, whose revolutionary doctrine echoed and re-echoed from those immortal shores of Lake Geneva. We do not properly appreciate the Huguenot unless we recognize that his influence and place in history is based upon his love and reverence for God and his insistence upon the right to worship God in his own way. Whatever of individual enterprise, commercial policy or heroic daring might have been blended with his zeal for religious liberty in the hearts of our Dutch fathers, the history of the French Protestant refugee leaves not a single doubt as to the sole purpose which brought him to the shores of the new world.

It was his religion that turned the eyes of the Huguenot from the tricolor to follow an alien flag; it was his religion that tore from the heart of the Huguenot the lilies of France; it was his religion that forced him to flee across the borders of the Rhine and finally to found his home in a strange and far-off land.

The Huguenot was the flower of France. His clean life was a constant reproach to the shocking morals of the court. The long reign of Louis XIV, distinguished for its corruption and its unremitting persecutions was a sore trial to the Huguenot. Nothing appeared to be more certain about 1650 than the Revocation of the Edict of Nantes—this meant but one of two things—conversion or extermination!

The Royal decree—"We forbid our subjects of the Reformed Protestant Religion any more to meet together in any place or private house for the purpose of carrying on any part of their religion and we renew our prohibition that neither they or their wives or their children do depart these dominions or transport their goods or effects under penalty of death for the men and the confiscation of bodies for women."

Our forefathers determined that they would no longer endure this perpetual repression and they crossed the borders of France and entered the friendly province of Palz in Germany, where they tarried at Manheim until they took the passage to America. The first to come to Ulster county were Matthias Blanschan with his wife and three children and Antoni Crispel and his wife, who sailed in the Gilded Otter, 26 April 1660. On 12 October 1662, Nicholas DePuy, his wife and six children sailed in the Pomerland Church. Louis DuBois, his wife, Catharine Blanschan, and two sons certainly preceded DePuy, although the date of their emigration is not a matter of record. They joined the Dutch Church in Kingston, 1 October 1661 and on the ninth of the same month, Antoni Crispel and his wife, Madelon Blanschan, were sponsors at the ceremony, the baptism being No. 9 on the church records.

Louis DuBois, or Louis, the Walloon, as he is sometimes styled in the Court records, was the leader of the Huguenots of Ulster county. He was granted a tract at New Dorf now Old Hurley, 25 April 1663, where at once he became prominently identified with public affairs; his prominence is to be sensed by the fact that as early as 1669, he was overseer of Old Hurley. The surviving records show him to have been in the forefront of every important undertaking. His was a strong character with a tenacity of purpose. He established a general trading post, importing cloth, southern ware, sugar and spices from Holland and the Barbadoes, which he traded with the settlers for lumber and grain. He dealt extensively with the Indians of the upper reaches of the Esopus, exchanging his wares for skins and furs. He amassed a considerable fortune, became a large landowner and money-lender. The early deeds of the county attest his wealth in mortgages.

On 7 June 1663, less than two months after the date of Louis DuBois's grant, the Indians demanded upon the Dutch settlement, New Dorf and a part of Wiltwyck were destroyed and some forty women and children carried into captivity. The official records which survive record their names. Among the prisoners were the wife and three children of Louis DuBois, two children of Matthias Blanschan, the wife and child of Antoni Crispel and Rachel DelaMontagne, the wife of Surgeon Gysbert vanImbroek. Not a living soul remained at New Dorf to tell the tale; several had been massacred and desolation reigned. Louis DuBois, the leader of the little community, returned at night to find his new home in ashes, his young wife and babies gone.

After many fruitless attempts on the part of the survivors to rescue the prisoners, assistance was finally given by the government at New Amsterdam. Gov. Stuyvesant sent a force of troops with two cannon under command of Captain Martin Cregier with orders to reduce the Indian fort and villages to ashes and to destroy the Esopus Indians. This was the largest and the most important expedition sent against the Indians during the Dutch Colonial period. Captain Cregier and his troops accompanied by volunteers from the settlement marched into the wilderness. Several times the soldiers returned to Wiltwyck bringing Indian trophies. One long journey was made over the mountains to Wawarsing, the stronghold of the Esopus Indians.

Upon their arrival the soldiers found the fort abandoned, the squaws with the white women and children had been hurried away. The soldiers destroyed the fort, burned the growing crops and stores of grain and returned to Wiltwyck. And, as the summer passed, Louis DuBois became hopeless and distracted.

What Catharine all these weeks? History gives no hint of her. All we know are the stories which have come down to us from the days of Louis. We are told that every evening Dominie Blom led his little congregation to the fort at Wiltwyck and there offered prayer for the safe return of the loved ones. Tradition tells us that it was early September when a friendly Indian brought word to the settlement that the Indians were guarding the prisoners on the mountain near Brunswick. Meanwhile, Rachel vanImbroek escaped and found her way home. In October, Captain Cregier with a party of volunteers which included the dauntless Louis DuBois set out from Wiltwyck with Rachel vanImbroek as guide. They followed the Rondout and the Wallkill creeks; Louis DuBois, pressing always in advance, surprised an Indian scout near Libertyville, before the latter could give the alarm; his death prevented the news of the approach of the white men and the Indians were taken completely by surprise. In the desperate fight which followed the Indians lost their chief and a score of savages, while Capt. Cregier's casualty list was five dead and six wounded.

There is a legend woven around the name of Catharine DuBois which has been immortalized in song and story and which was the theme of the pageant during the 250th celebration of the founding of New Palz in 1927. Tradition tells us that the chief of the Esopus Indians had ordered Catharine to be sacrificed. The squaws had gathered faggots and laid them in piles; all was ready for the fire to be lighted when Catharine began to sing; she sang while the Indians stood motionless "O daughter of Babylon, who art about to be destroyed." The Psalm was interrupted by a shot and Louis DuBois and his followers rescued the terrified captives.

After the rescue, the little group journeyed to Wiltwyck along the Wallkill trail. Louis DuBois was attracted to the fertile soil and the natural beauty of the land and tradition tells us that he then a French church was established there. It was not until sometime years later however, when his sons, Abram and Isaac, were young men that the hope was realized. The surviving records of the years during which Louis DuBois remained at New Palz are meagre; but it is evident that his life did not run too smoothly. The Court records reveal that he was the defendant in many actions. The sale of brandy to the Indians was prohibited but the remnant of records shows that the traffic was carried on extensively at New Dorf, where Matthias Blanschan conducted a distillery, and where, on one occasion, the magistrate informed Stuyvesant that distilled water had been found at the house of Louis, the Walloon, which had not been reported. On 6 October 1673, Louis DuBois was elected a magistrate; his term was brief, however, as he was replaced by Abraham Hasbrouck. From October 1661-April 1674, the baptism of his children appear regularly on the baptismal records of the Dutch Church, the baptisms of his three youngest children are not recorded although from their marriage records we know that they were born at Old Hurley. Whether the Dutch offended him or whether the beauty of the Wallkill beckoned, we do not know; but whatever the reason, we know that the little band of Huguenots under the valiant leadership of Louis DuBois left Old Hurley in the spring of 1677 and founded New Palz on the 40,000 acres which they had purchased from the Indians.

Louis DuBois is credited with having arranged the final purchase of a tract approximately twelve miles long and seven miles wide, beginning at Rosendale bounded west by the mountains running south to the present settlement of Brunswick, and stretching from the two extreme points in parallel lines eastward to the Hudson river. The purchase was confirmed by a Patent granted by Governor Andrus, 29 September 1677 to Louis DuBois and partners, Christian Devo, Pierre Deyo, Abraham Hasbrouck, Jean Hasbrouck, Andre LeFevre, Simon LeFevre, Louis LeFevre, Antoni Crispel, Abraham DuBois, Isaac DuBois and Hugo Freer.

These early patentees had come to a land, utterly new and strange, with one fixed purpose—to enjoy a freedom of religion untrammelled by priest or prelate. One of the first buildings was a loghut which served as a school and schoolhouse. The children were to be provided religious instruction for which they required the services of the Rev. Pierre Dailhe, the established minister of the French Church in New York City. The New Palz Church was organized January 22, 1674 with Louis DuBois, elder, and Hugo Freer, deacon. The important historical fact of the actual founding of a French Church at New Palz, is found in a record of the church, written in French. It contains eight distinct handwritings with autographs of Louis DuBois and Abraham Hasbrouck and this interesting entry:

"Puisse le Dieu, qui a put it into our hearts to build a house where He may be adored and served and which by His Grace we have finished and God grant that His Gospel may be preached here from one age to another until the day of Eternity."

In fancy, we can see the little church in the calm of Sunday morning and those who know sleep that last sleep, close by its ancient site, crossed its threshold with prayer and thanksgiving—for here, at last, they had found that peace that passeth understanding. Here, without fear, their minister preached the Gospel and administered the sacraments. Here, they brought their newborn babes that he might lay his hands upon them; here he joined in marriage young men and young women, whose descendants we are; and here, at last, he closed the eyes of those weary souls along life's pathway and tenderly prayed for those gone to that bourne from whence no traveler returns.

On 19 May 1686, Louis DuBois made another move which history does not explain, on that date he purchased for 40 pounds a house and lot of Dirk Schepmoes, on the northwest corner of what is now John street and Clinton avenue, and again sought the companionship of the Dutch settlers and there he died. After the death of her husband, Catharine DuBois married Jean Cottyn, a worthy Huguenot, formerly school-master of New Palz.

The Dutch dominion of the Kingston Church entered this unusual record to which Catharine Cottyn refers in her will.

"5 September 1703 was baptizing Rachel aged 17 years; after profession of her faith she received the sacrament of Holy Baptism, required of her in the formula of baptism she has promised to serve her mistress, Catharine Cottyn, and her master, Jean Cottyn, faithfully and diligently until their deaths and afterwards to be free."

The will of Catharine Cottyn, dated 23 July 1712, proved 19 December 1713, was written in French, translated in part it reads:

I will that the freedom dated 22 September 1702, which I have given to Rachel, which her name is now after having been baptized shall remain in force and be properly observed and she shall have thirty pieces of eight and other things and she shall have before my children divide the same. I will that that freedom which I have given to Dinah, dated 17 August 1703, shall remain in force and be properly observed."

Catharine Cottyn left surviving a daughter and six sons; but it was to none of these her negro girls should go as slaves. Such is the testimony your ancestors and mine have left upon the written page. We cannot but glory in our descent from these great souls, men and women, who believed in the Divine right of human liberty of conscience and were truly a light to lighten the world. Their cause was freedom. For that joy of freedom they suffered, sacrificed and were willing to die. They helped to found this mighty nation. They left to you and to me a priceless heritage! Mohonk still stands as a sentinel, guarding the place they loved. That mountain challenges us! What are you and I willing to do to protect that heritage from those sinister forces which would destroy it from without and from within?

Mohonk darkens in the western sky Threatening shadows around her pathway lie We soar in soul her inspiration given She lifts her peak and converse holds with Heaven!

Britain's Royal Air Force reportedly plans to develop a corps of physical and mental "super men" to fly 400-miles-per-hour fighting planes.

Public Opinion

In the experience of policing our highways we find that about 95 per cent of the drivers are responsible and careful motorists. The remaining 5 per cent is composed of the irresponsible, reckless, vacant-eyed motorists who have no regard for the rights and the safety of others who habitually violate all rules of the road and who must be forced to obey the laws. Even though the percentage of such drivers is small in comparison to the total yet they make the roads unsafe for every careful motorist and his family.

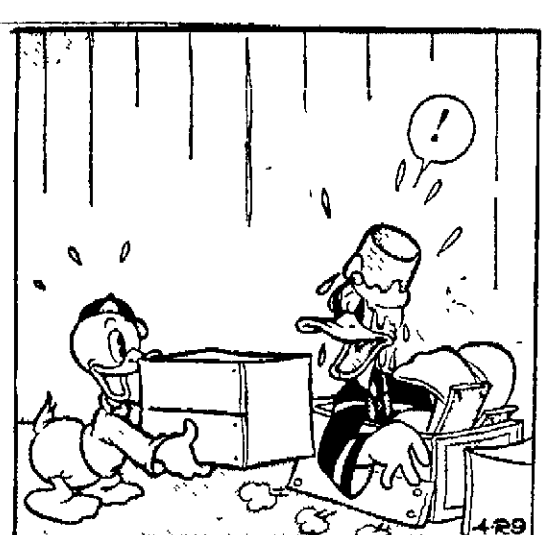

The first principle of safe driving is common courtesy. It is our endeavor to attain it by educational methods, advertising and newspaper campaigns and by enforcement. Public opinion in regards to safety will be the answer to the problem. When the public is determined to rid the highways of the dangerous driver and cooperate with the police in the fulfillment of this ideal, the goal will be reached. Public Opinion will reach this attitude. As an example of the change in public opinion, permit me to cite an example. When the model "T" was owned by many people, were you not one of us who liked to kick the "cut-out" open and hear her "kick them off"? Of course the law today forbids the use of cut-outs. Even though the law did not prohibit its use, would you have a "cut-out" on your car today? I think not. You would not care to be the subject of criticism of your fellowmen.

Concert Drive To Close Saturday

Saturday is the close of the campaign for the Kingston Cooperative Concert Association, and it is hoped by the executive committee of the association that no one will be left out. The plan of the organization requires that all those interested in hearing the concert must join this week, and before 5 o'clock tomorrow evening. A capacity house was secured for the present season, and it is anticipated that with such an outstanding series of attractions as has been announced, a repetition of another sold out house will result from the current campaign.

There are many people who did not realize that only those holding membership cards were admitted to the concert, because no single admissions are sold for any performance. This meant that very often applications for single tickets were made, and were necessarily refused.

Nearly 100 captains and workers are contributing of their time and effort this week to make good music possible through this drive. The association is operated on a no-profit and no-loss plan. The executive committee of the association feels that the attractions offered for next season give everyone a chance to hear some of the greatest musicians and musical ensembles available.

It is understood from headquarters in New York that the number of members who join the Cooperative Concerts in Kingston is among the highest according to the percentage of population, anywhere in the country. It indicates from this comment that Kingston is interested in good music.

It is not necessary to be asked to join the Cooperative Concert Association, but anyone may do so by applying directly to the campaign headquarters located in the Sun Room of the Governor Clinton Hotel up to and until 5 o'clock tomorrow evening. For additional information telephone 2700.

Mizpah Meant "Watch Tower"

The Hebrew word Mizpah or Mizpeh, meant "watch tower" and was used as the name of numerous places in Palestine. The modern use of the word as a paring salutation or as a talismanic inscription on rings, comes from the covenant between Jacob and Laban (Gen. 31:49). At Gilead they heaped stones as a memorial and called for a divine witness in these words: "The Lord watch between me and thee when we are absent one from another."

Many Use S-Mark

More than 25 countries besides the United States use the S-mark to designate monetary denominations which vary, in American money value, from two cents to $100. In Brazil, says Collier's Weekly, the S-mark is employed in place of the decimal point. Thus one hundred reis is written $100. And one millreis, or a thousand reis, is written $000.

Unable to learn who had access to a crib book found after a recent examination, the conjoint board of the Royal Colleges of Physicians and Surgeons is making the whole class of 150 retake the exam.

First Dutch Hold Annual Meeting

The annual congregational meeting of the First Reformed Dutch Church was held last evening. The Rev. Arthur E. Oudemool gave a complete resume of his past year, which was very gratifying to all. Two matters of importance were discussed, that of needed repairs to the great organ and the purchase of new windows for those which are out of repair. After the business of the church was disposed of, Mrs. W. Dean Hays, in behalf of the Ladies' Aid Society, presented a very delightful musical, consisting of quartets by Mrs. Hays, Mrs. Johnston, Mrs. Miller and Mrs. Radtke; piano recital by Phyllis Craft; duet by Mr. Miller and Mrs. Doy; solo by Mrs. Clarence Wolfenstein; and a piano-accompanied by Jean Molyneux. Mr. Frodenburgh accompanied the choir, and Mrs. Cowley accompanied Mrs. Wolfenstein, after which delicious homemade cake and ice cream were served and a social hour was enjoyed.

Murder, Suicide At Port Ben

(Continued from Page One) The couple went out on the lawn near the house. She looked out and observed her daughter held by the shoulder by Snow. Mrs. Lawrence went out from the kitchen to where the couple was and attempted to part them. While Mrs. Lawrence was endeavoring to separate the two young people Snow whipped out the revolver and fired the shots at the girl. According to Coroner Howard B. Humiston, one shot entered the head and one the abdomen. Mrs. Lawrence then released her hold on her daughter and the young woman fell to the ground mortally wounded. Snow then turned the gun on himself and fired a single shot through his left temple. The bullet passed entirely through the head and left a gaping wound on the right side. After an investigation by the authorities, the bodies were taken on in charge by Mr. Humiston. No autopsy was ordered and the coroner gave his verdict as one of murder and suicide. Funeral services for Robert Snow will be held Saturday at 4 o'clock from the Humiston Funeral Parlor, Kerkhof. The funeral of Miss Lawrence will be held Sunday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock from the H. B. Humiston Funeral Home in Kerkhof. Mrs. Lawrence was buried in Kerkhof cemetery. Besides her mother, Mrs. Orphella Lawrence, she is survived by a brother, Arthur M. Lawrence, of Newburgh. Funeral services for Snow will be held from the Humiston Funeral Home Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock with burial in the Pine Bush cemetery.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

Stocks Fall Off In Light Trading

New York, April 29 (AP)—[Faint symptoms of convalescence appeared in today's stock market after a morning relapse which dented leaders fractions to a point or more. While belated buying was of the timid variety, extreme losses were clipped down near the final hour. Virtually all the activity was in the forenoon, volume tapering off in subsequent proceedings. Transfers were at the rate of about 600,000 shares. Bonds shifted sluggishly and unevenly and major commodities pointed downward. Lower trends were observed in the principal European securities markets. Steels, motors, mail orders and specialties offered little resistance to the sliding trend. Conspicuous losers the greater part of the session included U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, General Motors, Chrysler, Sears Roebuck, Montgomery Ward, Standard Oil of Ind., Westinghouse, Du Pont, Alcoa, Union Carbide, Loew's, Air Reduction, Eastman Kodak, Anaconda and American Smelting. Carriers did better than most other categories. The Associated American Railroads took steps to put in force a wage reduction of about 15 per cent which, if it eventually goes through, would strengthen the financial position of the roads materially. Bethlehem Steel Corp. reported net of $294,908 for the first quarter of this year, against $233,523 in the first quarter of 1937. President Grace said that the corporation's pay point is now between 25 and 30 per cent of capacity, based on a stable price structure and conditions as they exist today. Current operations are at approximately 35 per cent of capacity, but incoming business is only about 20 per cent. Celanese Corp., largest producer in this country of cellulose acetate rayon is planning an issue of about $15,000,000 in debentures to help plant and equipment. The bank loans of $4,500,000. Bethlehem Steel has contracts in excess of $1,700,000 for work on Grand Coulee Dam. Secretary Ickes announced award of $1,089,937 to Consolidated Steel Corp. Rail labor would be glad to participate in the impartial fact-finding investigation of rail wages suggested by ICC Commissioner Eastman according to President Robertson of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen & Enginemen. Skelly Oil Co. had net of $664,770 in quarter ended March 31, compared with $1,534,412 in first quarter of 1937. National Distillers $1,445,233, vs. $1,425,008. United Fruit $1,072,338, vs. $698,859. Stone & Webster $72,328, vs. $209,979. Electric Auto Lite deficit of $32,242, compared with net year ago of $1,228,135. Organization of a new political party, National Progressives of America, was announced last night by A. W. Zerkow, secretary to Governor Philip LaFollette.

NEWS OF THE WORLD ON WHEELS

New York, April 29.—The highways of the nation will be traveled by a fleet of twenty-five unique new Buicks beginning May 2, when couriers of the New York 1939 World's Fair scatter to the four corners of the country with good will messages to the President of the United States and state governors from Grover Whalen, president of the Fair, and Herbert Lehmann, Governor of New York. The journey of the good will couriers is the final act of the colorful preview of the World's Fair to be held in New York starting April 30. Each of the model 81 and 91 Buicks selected for the tour will be suitably decorated as an official Fair tour car and each will bear on its roof a stainless steel model of the trylon and perisphere theme of the fair and a placard indicating the state for which it is bound. The couriers will travel directly to the state capitals to which they are assigned. There the state chairman of the World's Fair committee will present to the governor a giant key to the Fair and the courier will profess a scroll to be signed. Following the scroll to the state adding to the scroll the signatures of mayors in cities visited. #### Methodist Merger Plan

Birmingham, Ala., April 29 (AP)—Fate of a plan to merge three great branches of Methodism was placed today in the hands of the Conference of the Quadrilateral General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal church, south. Bishop John N. Moore, chairman of the commission on church union, informed the group that the Methodist Episcopal (northern) and Methodist Protestant Churches already have approved the program which would create a Methodist church of some 8,000,000 members. 15 Days for Intoxication Philip Millions, 38, who said he had no home, was arrested at Kerkhof Thursday by Board of Water Supply police, who charged him with public intoxication. Arraigned before Justice Philip Slutsky he was fined $15 in default of which he was committed to the county jail. Said to Old Name and Adrian is a very old name. It is probably from the Greek and means "brave," although one authority says it is Latin and merely means "from Adria." Adria gave its name to the Adriatic sea, writes Florence A. Cowles in the Cleveland Plain Dealer. Six popes have borne the name. St. Adrian was a Pretorian guard converted to Christianity and martyred in the Fourth century. His day, September 8, is especially observed by soldiers. Adrian (as the name was sometimes spelled) was emperor of Rome in the Second century. In 119 he began a tour of the empire, during which he built in Britain Hadrian's wall, extending from Solway to the Tyne, traces of which may still be seen. He also built the arch of Hadrian in Athens and Hadrian's tomb in Rome, now called the Castel Sant' Angelo. Adrian Turnebus was a Sixteenth century French classical scholar, professor in the College Royal, Paris. His works were published in three volumes. Adrian Brouwer was a Seventeenth century Dutch painter whose favorite subjects were rosetters. His best pictures are in European galleries. Adrian M. Legendre (d. 1833) professor of mathematics at the French Military school, wrote "Elements of Geometry" which was translated into many languages.

55 Pilots Will Fly Gliders May 7, 8

(Continued from Page One) The committee will tie up the meet to be held Apple Blossom week with a meet scheduled to be held at Ellenville on Memorial Day. In that event a point system would be adopted and the prizes awarded for aggregate of points earned at the two meets. It is stated that one ship has arrived already at Ellenville in preparation for the coming meet and the committee is confident that there will be a good attendance of members of the Metropolitan Soaring Society and others providing weather conditions only remain favorable. Planning Sam's Point Field Mr. Pulling said Thursday that the Noonday Club committee planned to go to Sam's Point that evening and look over the suggested site in that locality, with probability that a contract would be let at once for clearing a field and making preparations for getting things ready so that the new field could be used for the Memorial Day meet. Under present plans the take-off for the new field will be from a ledge at the head of the "North Gulley" the ships rising and heading directly over Ellenville. Not far distant a field measuring around 200 by 300 feet will be cleared where cars can be assembled. A road 20 feet wide will be built connecting with the present road leading to the fire tower on top of the mountain.

THE BRIDGE WAS OPEN AND FOUR ARE DEAD

Firemen are shown struggling to extricate four bodies from this auto after hauling it from deep water in the Calumet river, Chicago. The car crashed the barrier of an open bridge. ## Good Will Week Between Canada And U. S. Told

With a common heritage, similar economic and social problems, there are "no people like us," declared Dr. Mather, Canadian born doctor, now a citizen of the United States, in an address before members of the Kiwanis Club at the Governor Clinton Hotel, Thursday noon, the program being dedicated to "Kiwanis Canada—United States Good Will Week."

In opening his remarks the speaker traced the early history of Canada and United States showing the many events which were common history to the development of both countries. Of special interest was the statement that while Kingston, N. Y., was the seat of the first state government, Kingston, Ontario, was the seat of the first Canadian parliament.

A brief resume of Canadian events from its discovery in 1479 to its becoming a part of the British empire after the battle of the Plains of Abraham, was given, and interlaced was much that was history of the United States, the troubles of French and English armies, the Indians, the expeditions to the western frontiers and other events.

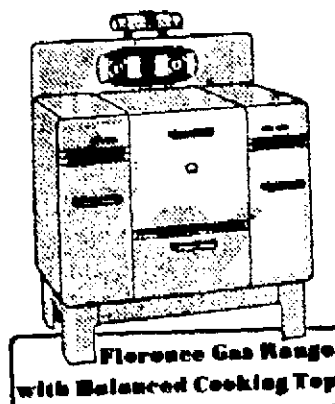

For 121 years the United States and Canada have lived side by side without armed forces along their borders, with nothing but a "scrap of paper" to guarantee peace," continued the doctor. This reference was to the treaty, under which there is a common understanding making it unnecessary for these nations to maintain armed forces along the borders.

The speaker said that the governments were similar in many respects, that economic, social and religious problems were the same, and in many cases treated alike. He called attention to the British North American Act, which provides for Canadian freedom, much the same as the Constitution of the United States.

Concluding, Dr. Mather declared that the United States and Canada enjoyed every privilege that two sister nations could enjoy, and that the heritage of both was such that a common understanding had developed which was the basis for the feeling between the two nations today. He pressed the hope that this friendship would continue and that the future would be as pleasant for the nations as had been the last 121 years.

Man About Manhattan

By George Tucker

NEW YORK—The fantastic anecdotes of Hollywood continue to wing their way back from studio lots, and if this one is to be believed, and there is no reason why it shouldn't, it merits a high place in the uncollected annals of absurdity.

It concerns Gilbert Gabriel, former New York dramatic critic, who went to Hollywood to write for the films. He didn't just go there. He rushed. By plane. At the insistence of studio chiefs who telegraphed him that speed was imperative. Drop everything and take the first plane, they urged. Hurry! Hurry!

So Gabriel tossed a few shirts in a bag and boarded a fast transcontinental plane. He arrived. He was met. He was welcomed and greeted enthusiastically.

He was cheered and told that the wheels probably would have ceased turning had he not caught that particular plane.

And then he sat quietly for three months, without writing a word.

BUT the ghost salary continued to come in. Each week he was handed his money. Good money. You could spend it anywhere. But Gabriel began to get jittery. He was tired of twiddling his thumbs. Finally he went to his studio chief:

"I can't stare into space and be happy. You got me out here on a rush assignment and I've been here for months without doing anything. I want an assignment. I want a story to write."

"Now it is all arranged. You are to write an important story—a magnificent picture starring Yehudi Menuhin, the prodigy, the great violinist, but there must be no love scenes in the picture. There must also be a fat part in the story for Toscanini, the great conductor. What a picture! What a box office! Yehudi and Toscanini! Remember now, no love interest for Yehudi. That is not permitted. But use your imagination."

"I'll go to work on that at once," Gabriel agreed. "When do you want it?"

"Oh," explained the producer, "I forgot to tell you. It won't go into production. We couldn't get Yehudi, and Toscanini wouldn't come out here at any price. We really aren't going to make the picture at all. But it's a swell idea for a story and you said you were unhappy because you had nothing to write. Now you can write and be happy as you like."

This story was told your correspondent by a writer who is vacationing in New York. He is under contract to the same studio and he assures me the story is true. There is no reason to believe it is not.

Chinese in Olden Days

In olden days the Chinese held all other peoples in contempt. A part of the famous letter sent the British king by the Chinese emperor in the year 1793 follows: "You, O King, live beyond the confines of many seas; nevertheless, impelled by your humble desire to partake of the benefits of our humble civilization, you have dispatched a mission respectfully bearing your memorial; . . . the earnest terms in which it is couched reveal a respectful humility on your part which is highly praiseworthy. . . . and then went on to state that the request was refused and that the English may, perhaps, by perpetual submission to our throne secure peace and prosperity even as the Chinese."

BE A POPULAR, UP-TO-DATE DANCER WITH SIMPLE NEW HOME COURSE

New dances don't find Jim and Kit on the sidelines. They're right out in front, shagging like experts. Who'd guess they taught themselves at home?

The peppy Shag Dip they're doing now they quickly picked up with the help of the diagram shown in the picture.

You can easily follow it. On Count 1, spring lightly to left foot. On 2, bend left knee, quickly slide right foot to side. On 3 and 4, repeat — starting with right foot.

How to get that bouncy "umph" good shag dancers have? Dance high on the balls of the feet, keep knees and ankles loose. Hold arms higher, stand farther apart than in the fox-trot. You want more room for the swings shag.

Easy as pie to pick up all the popular steps, from rumba to truckin', when you have diagrams showing you how to place your feet, instructions on how to keep time, fit steps to music.

Our new 40 page booklet, TEACH YOURSELF THE LATEST DANCE STEPS, diagrams basic steps for shag, fox-trot, conga, rumba, waltz, tango and new variations. How to combine steps smoothly. Also Shaggy truckin'.

Complete Big Apple directions. Tips on how to lead and follow. Ballroom etiquette help make you a graceful, popular partner.

Send 15c for our booklet, TEACH YOURSELF THE LATEST DANCE STEPS, to Kingston Daily Freeman, Home Institute, 109 West 19th street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS and the NAME of booklet.

The Big Offer

"THAT'S so," admitted Willy Nilly. The others felt quite sad to think that perhaps another chance had gone by when Willy Nilly might have been able to do something about his ears.

"I really forgot to speak to him about my ears," Willy Nilly continued, "because he made me an offer."

"An offer?" asked the Puddle Muddlers.

"You don't seem very happy about it," cawed Christopher Columbus Crow.

"I told him I could do nothing until I had talked it over with all of you. We hadn't time to talk while he was here—he was good about setting the place to rights and doing as much extra work as he could. Then the animals were about to leave and they had been our guests and I did want to have a few last talks with some of them and—anyway I said I'd wait until they had left and then discuss it."

Suddenly Rip trembled and his eyes looked very sad. His tail drooped between his legs and his ears seemed limp as well. "You had an offer to go away and do very well for yourself," he asked.

"Not exactly," answered Willy Nilly.

"Not exactly," repeated Willy Nilly.

"The Puddle Muddlers felt that they knew. After all they mustn't be selfish but no, no, they couldn't lose Willy Nilly. "Was it a very, very big offer?" asked Rip.

"Not exactly," repeated Willy Nilly.

defendant pleaded guilty to an assault, second degree, charge and was sentenced to a term of from 2 to 4 years in Clinton State Prison.

At the time of the sentence MacDonald, who has been in difficulty with his family, was given a suspended sentence on condition he kept away from Ulster county and also that he pay to his wife Stella MacDonald, the sum of $5 per week toward the support of his family.

MacDonald was arrested in February for a violation of this suspension condition when it was found he was $174 in arrears. He has been in jail since.

N. LeVan Haver, assistant district attorney, appeared for the prosecution before Judge Traver. John M. Cashin appeared for the defendant and Joseph H. Forman appeared for Stella MacDonald, and at that time Judge Traver made an order directing that MacDonald pay forthwith to his wife $70 and that the balance in arrears be paid $50 before June 1, 1938, and $50 before July 1, 1938, and that the sum of $5 weekly be paid forthwith through Mr. Cashin to Mrs. MacDonald.

Prohibition of the defendant was continued and he was ordered released from jail on compliance with the conditions of the order.

Red Men Held a Big Pow Wow Here On Thursday Night

About a year ago Wiltwyck Tribe, No. 547, Improved Order of Red Men of Kingston, was instituted, and last evening the tribe held a big open pow-wow in the wigwam at the corner of Fair and Franklin streets, which was marked by an address by Albert Dammyer of New Rochelle, past great sachem of the state. An excellent entertainment program furnished by talent from Catskill and this city was provided.

Red Men from Catskill and New Salem were in attendance at the opening meeting which was presided over by Gordon Lloyd of Catskill, zone chief of Columbia, Greene and Ulster counties.

Among the local guests of the tribe were Alderman-at-large John J. Schwank, who brought the greeting of Mayor Heiselman, who was unable to attend; former Alderman Joseph Epstein of the fifth ward, who also spoke briefly, and Judge Bernard A. Colleton, Ulster county Democratic leader.

Mr. Dammyer in his address traced the early origin of the Red Men down through the years to the present time and stressed the patriotic nature of the organization.

During the evening Charles Westfield of Catskill and his orchestra furnished a fine musical program and also accompanied the dances in Agnes C. Doolan's Kiddie Revue, in which several talented children from Catskill gave a number of dances. The children who took part were the "Fred Astaire" and "Ginger Rogers" of the Catskills, impersonated by Doty Steinhorn and Charles Haussler; Dorothy Kamernayer, Evelyn Steinhorn, while Rudy Caplanco acted as master of ceremonies and sang two solos. Florence Yampone of Catskill also gave a tap dance.

Louis Casargolo of Catskill gave two selections on the musical saw, and the entertainment closed with the Circle Bar Boys of Kingston. John Bouse, Clifford Every and Herbert Every in several musical and vocal selections.

Following the entertainment refreshments were served and a social hour enjoyed.

This was the first open meeting to be held by the recently organized tribe, and it proved so successful that undoubtedly another open meeting will be held later in the year.
